THE DRAMA

MARGARET VRYLING. Who is appearing in "Pilate's Daughter" at the Chestnut Street Opera House

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

Michael Morton, author of "The Yellow Ticket," which will be the attraction at the Garrick Theatre commencing Tuesday evening, October 13, is a playwright of international fame. Among his best-known works are "Resurrection," in which Blanche Walsh starred with great success for several seasons, and which was written in collaboration with Henri Bataille; "My Wife" and "The Run-away," adaptations from the French, made by Mr. Morton for Miss Billie Burke; "A Rich Man's Son," in which W. H. Crane, the comedian, starred successfully, and "Colonel Newcome," a dramatization from Thackeray's novel, "The Newcomes," which was written originally for Sol Smith Russell, but in which that comedian was not seen, owing to the fact that his health broke down at that time. The manuscript was found in the possession of Sol Smith Russell at the time of his death and was afterward used by Willard, the English actor, for a season. It has never been seen in New York, and it is possible that Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree will revise the play shortly for production in America, appearing himself in the role of Colonel Newcome. Michael Morton is a brother of Mrs. Martha Morton Cronheim, who is well known as an American playwright.

Stanley Dark, who will play Lord Darlington, has been the leading man with Margaret Anglin in several productions, notably in "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie," "Green Stockings" and in one or two special New York revivals in which Miss Anglin was the stellar player.

Charles Conway, an English entertainer, has arrived in New York and will make his first appearance before an American audience. Mr. Conway, who has been before the British public for the last 17 years, proposes to make his American debut in a series of Dickensian impersonations.

Letters received from England confirm the fact that Robert Lorraine, the actor, has already distinguished himself as a member of the English military flying corps. Mr. Lorraine was one of the first Englishmen to go in for aviation, and four or five years ago he made several sensational flights. When he became engaged to Miss Marie Lohr, however, that young actress insisted that he should soot more; but as their engagement was subsequently broken off, and Miss Lohr became the wife of some one else, Mr. Lorraine evidently considered himself justified in returning to his earlier love, the aeroplane.

Frederick William Wile tells the following story of Richard Strauss. It was at a general rehearsal at Dresden of "Elektra," and Doctor Strauss rushed down the aisle, and arriving at the footlights suddenly commanded a halt in the performance. "Madame Schumann-Heink, the Clytemnestra, was in the throes of a tumultuous vocal episode. 'Leader, leader,' exclaimed Strauss. 'I can still hear the singer!'"

After spending the summer in San Francisco, David Warfield returned to New York recently to begin rehearsals for his second season in "The Auctioneer." It had been David Belasco's intention to present Mr. Warfield in a new play this year, but because of the sensational nature of the receipts that marked his appearance.

once on tour in "The Auctioneer" last season. It was decided to devote another year to the revival of this comedy. Taking in the principal cities of the South, and extending through Texas, where "The Auctioneer" has never been played, Mr. Warfield will proceed to the Pacific coast.

Practically the same cast that supported Mr. Warfield last season has been re-engaged by Mr. Belasco, including Marie Bates, who has been under the Belasco management 16 consecutive seasons, 13 of which have been spent in the various plays in which Mr. Warfield has appeared.

Molly McIntire, who is successfully playing the leading role in "Kitty MacKay," the Scotch comedy which is booked for early presentation at the Adelphi Theatre, is really a Scotch lass, having been born and reared in "bonnie Scotland." "And if I cannot be in dear old Scotland, I must be in a Scotch play, which is the next best thing," she remarks. This is why she steadfastly refuses parts in plays that lack the Scotch atmosphere.
